tf 2958 Amoy, 16th December, 1867.

NOTICE.

THE Undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of vessels discharging at this port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by making use of their Wharves at New Harbour.

With the assistance of steam cranes, general cargo can be landed easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick godowns on the wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilfering of cargo common among boatmen, are avoided by vessels using the wharves.

Cartage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises, and, when required, a steam tug is always available.

On the 18th July, Lieutenant Commander STOPFORD, R.N., of H.M.'s g.-b. Starling, drowned off Poo-sin, Hainan, during a squall.

The delivery of the Daily Press from this office commenced on Friday morning at 10.05, and the last messengers left the office at 10.30.

The Daily Press

HONGKONG, JULY 25TH, 1868.

H. E. JUI, Viceroy and Commander-in-Chief of the Two Kwang Provinces, Acting Governor of Kwang-tung, &c., &c., is a wonderfully compassionate and charitable man. Deeply impressed with a sense of his duty to the common father of all good Chinamen, His Imperial Majesty the Emperor, he values as the greatest of his privileges the honour of being allowed to contribute in any way to the Imperial revenues. It is the first duty of a child to support its parents. It is the most important of a Chinaman's duties, the most valued of his privileges, to be allowed to add his mite to the annual offerings of a grateful people to the Son of Heaven. With JUI, this is not a mere matter of duty, it is an intimate conviction, a deeply-rooted, heartfelt sentiment. He cannot conceive it possible that others should not think and feel as he does. It seems to him that no greater misfortune could befall a good Chinaman than that he should be prevented in any way from contributing to the Imperial revenues. He deeply compassionates the poor trader fallen into the hands of pirates and banditti, not because he has lost his property, and is in danger of losing his life, but because he, alas! poor fellow, will have now no excuse for proceeding to the Custom-house or inland revenue office with his little offering of love,—will not now, perhaps, have the wherewithal to testify his filial reverence for, and deep devotion to, his Sovereign. JUI has heard that there are pirates, and that many traders and much opium fall into their hands. He is sad at heart, and deeply ponders how he may relieve his fellow subjects from this infliction, and enable them without fear and trembling to gratify the first wish of their hearts, to pay the li-kin and the import duties to their Sovereign's servants. JUI has no desire to hurt the pirates, or interfere with their little amusements. He is the soul of compassion. They are useful, too, in their way. They are the punishment sent by heaven on those rebellious and abandoned children of the Emperor, who, in the wickedness of their hearts, desire to evade the payment of all duties,—who would rather smuggle a hundred chests of opium into China than pay duty on one little ball. JUI determines to let the pirates be. But, happy thought, why should he not erect an altar in some convenient place, and invite his compatriots to approach and lay their offerings on the shrine before they tempt the dangers of the sea,—before they risk the encounter with the winds and waves, and the lawless men who frequent the briny waters, and while they still have it in their power to satisfy their ardent longings and deep sense of filial duty. Why should he not? There was nothing to prevent him. Casting his eyes around, it struck him that many Chinese, with much Opium, left Hongkong in the course of the year, and strange to say there were but few who came to lay their offerings on the customs' shrine. The most of them had fallen into the hands of pirates, or had been driven out of their course, and compelled to land their goods where, sad to say, there was no custom-house to receive their vows—no duly ordained priest to accept their offerings. In pity he would plant altars and temples within easy reach of Hongkong, under the guns of those English within whose reach pirates seldom care to come; send Ministers and a Treasurer; make proclamation to all whom it might concern, and so gladden the hearts and relieve the consciences of the long-tailed children of the Brother of the Moon, and, with an excess of precaution we can hardly too much admire, lest the Chinese should not, at first, be able to find their way without guidance, he resolves to send down war junks and customs' cruisers, to turn the wanderers into the right path. If any, after that, were so far wanting in their sense of duty—so utterly lost to all filial affection—as to evade the offerings, let them perish by the hands of friends or foes. It mattered not.

Human nature is weak, and JUI felt it, and knew it. In the bustle of getting under way and preparing for sea, some might forget that they had a duty to pay, and have passed the newly established stations before they remembered it. In the boundlessness of his charity, JUI provide even for these weak ones. They should have an opportunity of relieving their consciences before they set sail, when there was nothing to distract their minds. A shrine, an altar, and a high priest at Hongkong,—in Victoria itself,—would meet every possible contingency. No sooner said than done. The English, thank the Gods, are not like the French. They are open to reason; they have tender consciences and a deep sense of duties. They had submitted to many things, they would, possibly, submit to this also, if only it was put before them in the same light in which it had struck JUI.

His Excellency was not far wrong in his conclusion. Although we laugh at the transparent folly of his proclamation, and see through the flimsy veil of pseudo-philanthropy,—Chinese philanthropy—with which he seeks to disguise his real motives, we are too law abiding a people not to recognise his right to protect his master's revenues in the best way he can, and not to admit, that, great a nuisance as it is, his extension of the customs' system to the neighbouring coasts is, within limits, only a proper exercise of his right. If, however, these customs' stations are to be established at all, and to be recognised by us, it is our right to be secured against their abuse to the injury of our trade, to have them effectively organised and strictly regulated—to have a power of constant supervision, external of course; and to have, if we desire it, European officers in charge. We are further entitled to claim from the Chinese Government a fulfilment of all the duties imposed on them by the laws of nations, or by treaty. Coast and harbours well lighted and buoyed. Piracy suppressed—squeezes put an end to,—the country thrown open to our people, to trade and travel in as they please—internal peace secured—roads made, canals opened, facilities for mines and railways granted, and a policy adopted which will not only benefit the Chinese, but which will advance our trade and increase our wealth and importance as a colony. This Li-kin, to levy which the new stations have been opened, is, as we understand, not so much an imperial as a provincial tax. It is expended within the Vice-royalty of the Two-Kwang. If the Colonial Government aids the Viceroy in his attempt to increase his revenue from this source, the Colonial Government ought to claim advantages and immunities for its subjects, resident in Hongkong, commensurate with the benefits it confers. Hongkong ought to rule; ought at least to influence the ruler of the Two-Kwang. JUI can open the Pearl and East and West rivers to our steamers, if he pleases. JUI can, if he so determines, grant a concession for a railroad to Canton, or overcome the prejudices that prevent the provincial city and Fatshan from being connected by rail.

Will Sir RICHARD MACDONNELL ask these things of H. E. JUI? Will the Chamber of Commerce suggest them, and the Hongkong Association lend its support?

These things may not bear much fruit now, they will be invaluable in the good time that is coming.

The Circus.

There was a better attendance at the Circus last night, and the performance of the "Hippodramatic Spectacle" of Turpin's Ride to York, was received with great applause, the last scene,—the death of Black Bess—being the most noticeable feature, the mare appearing to be quite dead, when carried out "shoulder-high." To night the performance is to be for the benefit of the daring equestrienne Ella Zoyara, when she will appear in male attire, and promises to go through some wonderful performances. In addition to which the principal artistes of this mammoth establishment are to appear, and Turpin's Ride to York will be repeated. As this will be one of the last nights the public will have the opportunity of witnessing this first-rate company, before their departure for San Francisco, it is to be hoped there will be a good attendance.

The "China Magazine."

The thirteenth number of this magazine, which completes the first volume, is to hand, although four days later than it was promised. The two illustrations are rather better than some of the previous ones have been. The "Chair Coolie" would have been more complete had the poles been in their proper places. The one of "Hongkong, looking East," is too small and indistinct to convey any proper idea to strangers or friends at a distance of the size, appearance, or importance of the island generally. Of the small quantity of letter-press, the principal objection is that in the "little speech" the Conductor has scattered his capital "I's" broadcast. In the index there are evidently some typographical errors. Considering the difficulties that had to be overcome in producing a work of this kind in so remote a place as China, the book generally reflects great credit on the Conductor. The announcement made, that it will in future appear only once a month, is an improvement, and a still greater one would be made if the views were larger and more comprehensive.

Naval Intelligence.

H.M. gunboat Starling, which arrived last night, in charge of the gunner, Mr. Tilley, reports the death of her commander on the 18th instant. It appears the Starling, Lieut.-Commander Stopford, left Hongkong for Hainan on the 9th instant, and after putting into Cup-chow, arrived at Hoi-how on the 12th. A start was made from this place to cruise round the island, and everything went well until the 18th instant, when the gunboat was at a place called Poo-sin. Here Lieutenant Stopford took one of the boats, with four men and a China boy, and went ashore to endeavour to get a pilot. A Chinaman willing to pilot the gunboat was found, and taken into the boat, but, sad to say, as the small craft was returning to the gunboat a tremendous squall came on, in which she capsized, pitching all hands into the water. A Chinese sampan, which happened to be near, came to the rescue, and succeeded in picking up the four seamen and Chinese boy, but Lieut. Stopford sank to rise no more, and the pilot lately taken on board the boat was also drowned. The Starling managed to ride out the squall, being at the time anchored with two cables in four fathoms of water. As soon as practicable the gunner, Mr. Tilley, on whom the charge of the gunboat now devolved, sent out parties to search for the body of the lamented lieutenant, but without avail, for although the boat was found, nothing was seen of the unfortunate gentleman. Mr. Tilley then procured another pilot, and on the 21st left Poo-sin for this port, arriving safely yesterday evening.

Police Intelligence, 24th July.

BEFORE C. MAY, ESQ.

BURGLARY.

Ho-a-sam, grass-cutter, was charged with burglariously entering the house of one Sew-a-wai, and stealing therefrom a short musket, a large horse pistol, a pair of double swords, and a quantity of rice, on the night of the 22nd instant.

Complainant said he was accountant of the sheong-tai chandler's shop, No. 54, Stanley, and he is at present managing the business during the absence of his master. On the night of the 22nd July he retired to rest at 9 o'clock, sleeping in the shop. Notwithstanding his having seen the doors properly secured, at about half-past two on the morning of the 23rd he was awakened by hearing the sound of rice being moved. He immediately roused up the shop coolies, and on getting a light discovered that a hole in the partition wall, between his shop and a vacant one next door, had been made. On examining the premises he found that the above mentioned articles had been stolen. He reported the case to Inspector Ambrose, and his shop was examined by the inspector, but nothing was found. Shortly after the Inspector had gone away he discovered a track of rice from the hole in the partition to the door of the prisoner's house, which stands a short distance off. The Inspector was sent for, and when he arrived prisoner's house was searched, and all the missing property found therein. He identified all the property, even the rice, a sample of which he produced in court.

On this evidence Mr. May remanded the prisoner until the 27th inst.

DUCKING A POLICEMAN.

George King, seaman, unemployed, George Giles, of H.M.S. Basilisk, and Alexander Menzies, of H.M.S. Adventure, were severally charged with being drunk and assaulting the Police in the execution of their duty, part of which is undoubtedly the capture and safe keeping of "tars" who imbibe too freely.

P.C. George Smith said last night he was on duty near the Government Wharf, when he heard a great noise, and on running to the spot ascertained that the three prisoners, who were all drunk, were struggling with each other in trying to get into a sampan. Now, the P.C., as an energetic constable should do, immediately rushed into the fray, and endeavoured to capture all three prisoners at once. The third prisoner, Menzies, was the most violent of the three, and it was that one, who by means of a "strong pull, a long pull, and a pull altogether," got the second prisoner into the sampan. P.C. Smith, we are grieved to state was ignominously "ducked" by the jolly tars, who were not secured until two great Sikhs came upon the scene. The constable was not assaulted, he said, beyond the ducking.

In defence, the first prisoner simply said, "I was drunk, and I do not remember what took place." Second prisoner, shorter still, replied, with a half laugh, "I was drunk."

Menzies, however, the third prisoner, is what is known as a sea-lawyer. He wished to argue the point a bit. His version of the affair was that Giles was beastly drunk, and was lying on the cold stones at the wharf. He made several laudible attempts to get his "chum" into the boat, and would have succeeded if "them black perlice," had not come up. He remarked, parenthetically, that the "black perlice always interfered with a man-of-war's man when he came ashore."

Mr. May said it was generally the men-of-war's men who meddled with the Sikh police in the first instance, and he had no doubt about its being so in the present occasion. King, who was not so active in the row, would have to pay ten shillings, or seven days, and Giles and Menzies twenty shillings each, or fourteen days' imprisonment.

THE "DONNAI" MURDER.

Karlita, the colash, charged with murdering another seaman while on shore, was again brought up, and remanded for a week, the necessary witnesses not having yet arrived.

ANOTHER BATTLE OF THE "NILE."

Yesterday afternoon, Captain Wilson, of the S. S. Nile, made an application to Mr. May, to hear a case in which the steward and carpenter of the steamer are the complainant and defendant. Captain Wilson stated that although the affair had taken place off the Cape of Good Hope, he had not stopped long enough in Singapore to have the question settled by the magistrate of that port. On arrival here he had called at the Harbour-master's, but had been informed that it was a case for the jurisdiction of the Police Magistrate. He therefore hoped his Worship would appoint a time for the hearing of the case.

Mr. May, however, was of a different opinion to the Harbour-master. He thought it was a matter to be settled by the marine magistrate.

Frederick Kail, the steward, was then sent down to the Harbour-master's office with an Inspector of Police, but what was the result of the interview down there has not transpired. However, Mr. May took the case during the afternoon, when the carpenter was placed in the dock, charged with an assault on Frederick Kail, the steward.

Complainant's statement was to the effect that on the 15th of June last, when the Nile was rounding the Cape of Good Hope, he had some words with the carpenter, in consequence of which he knocked him down. The row then seemed to be all over, but about two hours after the carpenter had measured his length on deck, he happened to be passing forward, when the valiant "chips" called to him to come and fight. He replied to the invitation, but on arriving at the ground for the encounter, "chips" knocked him down by striking him on the jaw with an iron hammer. He had not since that time quite recovered the use of his jaw.

Dr. Beck, surgeon of the Nile, said he examined the wound on Kail's face immediately after the affair, and found a severe contused wound, such as might be made by a blunt instrument.

Defendant said he had witnesses to prove that he struck the steward with a wooden hammer, and not an iron one.

Mr. May then said that the case should stand over until to-morrow, for the carpenter to produce his witnesses.

During the morning's sitting Mr. May disposed of a goodly number of cases, but as usual the "Nuisance pidgan" occupied the chief time of the court.

Changes in the China Trade.

(From the Supreme Court & Consular Gazette.)

The speech which Mr. Consul Winchester made at the farewell dinner, which was recently given to him at the Shanghai Club, was peculiarly interesting as carrying the minds of some of his hearers back to a state of affairs in China widely different from that which we see at the present day. To many who heard him, the scenes described were merely historical; while to a limited number, they recalled some of the most interesting episodes in the history of foreign relations with this country. Twenty-five years is a large portion of the transitory existence of man; it is no small period in the history of a country; and in a place so peculiarly situated as China in recent times: where a vast nation, slumbering in the gentle dotage of an old and worn out civilization, has suddenly been roused by the advent of new men from distant countries, who have brought with them new ideas and new principles, the progress marked by a quarter of a century forms a subject of great interest to those who love to mark the transformations which time and circumstances effect in the world.

The feature which is most striking in taking a retrogressive glance of this nature, is the great disproportion which is discernible between the progress which has been made politically and socially in our relations with this country, and that which has been made commercially. While the European is still excluded from the interior of the country, and still regarded by the large mass of the Chinese as little better that the old outer barbarian he was considered in the earliest days of our intercourse with China, commerce has increased ten and twenty fold, and European appliances have become freely introduced and thoroughly appreciated by the natives at the few places where the foreigner is permitted to reside.

Few people are able fully to estimate the changes in the nature of business with China, which have been gradually matured during the last twenty-five years. A state of things in harmony with modern ideas of trade has become so thoroughly established, that it is now almost impossible to form a definite idea of what was the ordinary course of business in old times. Some few old China hands can still recollect the days when the partners in the London Houses made their long, tedious voyages round the Cape; purchased their ventures at Canton, and more recently at the new port of Shanghai, and returned home by the same wearisome route, generally in the vessel in which their tea or silk was stowed. Few can remember those days; but then it was, according to all accounts, that the China trade was in its glory, and that the China merchant acquired his prestige. To individual men who embarked in the trade, there can be no doubt that very great opportunities were offered. The knowledge of the business was confined to a limited number, and competition had not yet stepped in to diminish profits. Purchases in those days were expected to show a margin upon the last quotations from home; but even this left considerable room for speculation, as advices took so long to come, and arrived at such irregular intervals, that it was impossible to keep a thorough run of the market, and rough guesses at statistics were all that could be made. Upon the whole, however, the merchant found that his trade paid him; and many have regretted the changes that modern improvements have introduced, and lamented the altered value of trade, which has become more extended.

The facilities offered by the establishment of banks; by the regular mails and telegrams; the constant supply of credit and freight, have, it is lamented, tended more to the benefit of the Chinaman than of the foreign merchant. To a great extent there is no doubt the complaint is well-founded; although there is something also to be said on the other side of the question. No doubt the peculiar powers which the Chinese possess of working the inland trade to their own advantage by the imposition of restrictive dues and by means of combinations backed up by their own authorities, have made them the greatest benefitors by the increased traffic; and they have fully made amends for any advantage which was permitted to foreigners in the earlier days. But it is also to be borne in mind that the aggregate of trade has increased to an enormous extent, and that the same people who in the younger days of the trade journeyed to and from China with shipments on which they usually turned handsome profits, can now accomplish ten or fifteen times the amount of business in a year, and that the diminishing of profits upon particular shipments is even to the individuals themselves, on the average made up for by the greater extent of the trade to be done. In a public point of view, it scarcely needs to be pointed out that the magnitude of the trade is of the utmost importance. That a larger number of the people should be able to consume the products of China in Europe and America, and that foreign manufactures should be more widely consumed in China, may be taken to be the grand, leading principle which has to be looked to in the furtherance of the true trading interests of both Foreigners and Chinese. All considerations beside this are more or less transitory and collateral, excepting of course the necessity of guarding against such obstructiveness on the part of the Chinese as will prevent the trade being fairly lucrative to the foreign merchant; because, if this be the case, the business must of necessity be abandoned by many, and will consequently decrease in magnitude.

The change which has been wrought during the last quarter of a century in the China Trade may, therefore, so far as it has gone, be regarded as in every way beneficial; and the complaints to the contrary are nothing more than a particular phase of that peculiar habit of looking upon the past as far better than the present, which affects so large a number of people. The "glorious old days" seem to us our general rule of a very visionary nature. The pain, difficulties, and troubles connected with them are soon forgotten, and the picture which is presented to the imagination is commonly one founded rather upon fancy than reality. In common with other branches of commerce, the China Trade has been affected by the great change which steam, electricity, and improved means of inter-communication have generally wrought. The facilities of acquiring information, and of starting a business in almost every part of the world are so great, that there is hardly any trade now which is a closed borough at the command of the few. In former days the China trade partook much of this nature, and hence the facility with which a few men enriched themselves by it. It is now thrown open to the whole world. English, French, and American mail steamers, of a size and splendour almost unequalled, keep China in nearly weekly communication with the West; another French mail is to be established which will make this communication more than weekly; banks, insurance offices, fine lines of coast and river steamers offer every facility for local trade; telegrams inform us of the Home news in less than a month. All this has been brought about in some twenty-five years; and this progress, so rapidly on the increase, points to further change which must be produced within a short period. Such a weight of appliances—if we may use the expression—will prove incompatible with the exclusion of Europeans from all local trading. The amount of capital invested will be likely to redound only to the advantage of the Chinese, unless those, who at great expense have established themselves in these parts, are enabled by local enterprise to defray a portion of the cost which has been necessary to introduce these changes. It is not, therefore, without reason that the question of inland trading has recently been discussed both in the public prints and also in official quarters. The natives of China have of late years profited to an enormous extent by the appliances which foreigners have introduced. The tea and silk trade alone have brought millions to the people of this country; and but for the obstinate restrictiveness of the officials, the same result must have attended the import traffic. It is reasonable, therefore, to look at the present time for a further extension of those facilities for trade which have redounded so materially to the advantage of the Chinese; and which, under the peculiar circumstances existing, tend so much more at the present time to their benefit than to that of the European nations, who have been instrumental in introducing them. We cannot help often being struck by the peculiar manner in which the advantage derived by China from foreign trade is overlooked. In the face of the fact that large numbers of the population find great difficulty in obtaining a livelihood, it is constantly asserted that China has all that she requires within herself, and does not need foreign trade. And yet we find the natives eager purchasers of our goods, notwithstanding heavy imposts, and glad to sell their teas and silk at handsome profits to the foreign merchant, while the Government also benefit by being in receipt of a handsome Customs' revenue. Under such circumstances, the gain to China from foreign intercourse is not to be denied, and the time cannot be very far distant when a further spread of our trading relations with this country will be brought about, notwithstanding any attempt on the part of the Chinese to prevent the advance of a state of things which, if they knew their true interests, they would use every endeavour themselves to bring about.

Probably in another twenty-five years, the days when foreigners were confined to a few ports round the Coast, and were prohibited from going into the interior, will be considered quite as strange as the old Canton times appear to the merchant of the present day. In those times had any one predicted that the China trade would become what it now is, he would have been looked upon as an idle and Utopian theorist. But nevertheless this amount of progress has been achieved; and it is impossible to doubt that further advances must be steadily made in the same direction.

Small Coins.

(From the North China Daily News.)

A plague of franc pieces has come upon the settlement lately. Every shroff has a stock of them, and tenders them boldly as the equivalent of twenty-five cents, in giving change on payment of a bill. Buying them at the rate of five to the dollar, and then paying them away at the rate of four, he nets a clear twenty per cent. on every operation. Add to this, too, his gain on the number of francs he can induce his master to accept as the result of each day's collection, and the profit must amount to a very considerable sum at the week's end. It is only lately that shroffs have awakened to the full extent of the field for peculation that franc pieces open out to them. These need only to be met with in fair proportion to the shillings, guilders, 24 kopeck pieces, half rupees, "punish," Mexican and U. S. quarter dollars, and various other coins that pass current in this essentially cosmopolitan settlement, as the equivalent of twenty-five cents. But all these have lately given way to a perfect deluge of franc pieces, which have fairly swamped their more valuable competitors. And, unless foreigners make a stand against it, we may expect to see this squeeze soon added by custom to the many others which shroffs, compradores, and butlers have gradually devised and accumulated. It would not, of course, matter if our Chinese friends would receive francs at the same price at which they give them; but, while tendering them as unexceptionable quarters, they refuse to receive them as other than fifths. In other words, dollars being now worth about 1,140 cash, they net about 50 cash on every transaction in which a franc passes through their hands. A case occurred to us lately, in paying two small bills: we received a franc in change from one shroff, at the rate of a quarter-dollar, or 285 cash, and paid it away to another at the rate of 230 cash, within a quarter of an hour. This beats out the field the squeeze which bank compradores are wont to levy, on dollars handed to them. The latter may be less justifiable, and is certainly more ridiculous, but in amount it is comparatively trifling. A man laughs, though he is annoyed, at having fifty dollars out of five hundred rejected at one bank, because he knows perfectly well that another will accept forty-five of them as beyond reproach. It is rather annoying when one bank refuses to accept dollars which have been just paid out by another, and when the same compradore who has paid them denies their identity on their being brought back. But one cannot help laughing at the absurdity of the system so glaringly made manifest, and at the folly which perpetuates it. At some very remote date, we expect to find the banks obliged to yield in this respect, as in the six months usance of bills. The franc nuisance, in the meantime, is in our own hands. We are obliged to have dealings in dollars with the banks; but we are not obliged to accept a single franc in payment, at other than its actual worth. A wise plan would be to refuse them altogether, and so drive them out of the market. They are not a legal tender, that one must accept at their true or any other value. And there are plenty of other coins to replace them. To say nothing of the Hongkong twenty-cent pieces, which rank as curios—so much so that we may safely aver not one man in fifty in the settlement has ever seen one—the various other 25-cent pieces that are to be met with, and even shillings, are quite near enough to the standard for purposes of currency. Recurring to the Hongkong coinage, it does seem strange that, in face of the constant complaints by Hongkong of the absence of demand, and the complaints in the North that it is impossible to get coins, some attempt is not made by the colonial government to supply at once the double want of a market and a supply. At one end there is a demand, at the other an outlet is wanted; yet neither craving is satisfied. Hongkong ten cent pieces sell, here, eight or nine to the dollar; quarter and half dollars would be gladly welcomed both as convenient coins and as representing the value they profess to. But none of the three are current or obtainable, except as curios, and yet we are overrun with francs.

Music in Vanity Fair.

Besides the public concerts, festivals, and operas, there is other music going on in Vanity Fair which makes no little noise, and which is likewise influenced by the weather. Its performers indulge in part-singing, oratorios, and heavy music generally in the winter, and get up Italian scenas, ballads, and lighter compositions, in the summer time. Will you go with me to Lady Mortgage's "afternoon music," in Belgravia? It is a crowded assembly—a very crush—some of the guests are sitting on the stairs. Nearly all the fair sex present are in bonnets. One or two have thrown off their dainty head-gear—they are the amateurs, whose performance constitute the "afternoon music." The young lady at the pianoforte, talking to the accompanyist, is a high soprano, very particular as to her runs and shakes. She is instructing the maestro, who seems half afraid of her. The stern-looking dame in the doorway, her maternal parent, peers round the room with an air as much as to say, "My daughter's going to sing; and if you talk I'll cut you." Nay fear, my dear madam; your daughter's singing will command attention. The heat is oppressive; the fans in motion keep up a sort of æolian accompaniment to the amateur prima donna's vocal gymnastics. Her grand scena comes to an end at last, and the melting audience make themselves warmer by applauding. They wait languidly for a flaxen-haired, blue-eyed damsel to sing an English song—the Patti of London society, possessing more true music in her little soul than the Patti of the stage can boast of. Behold the enchantress, as she is taken away from among her friends in the furthest corner of the room. The hostess leads her to the piano, at which, with the most artless simplicity and grace, she sits down, and accompanies herself in a song Sullivan has written for her. It is a treat to listen to such singing. With no apparent effort, the effect is that which only a sympathetic voice and pure artistic feeling can produce. All she does seems facile enough; but compare her performance with that which is coming after, and you will soon acknowledge its superiority, even if her singing has not touched your heart, which I very much doubt. After the song comes a fashionable tenorino, with very little voice, but a great deal of affectation to make up for it. He gets warm, sings out of tune, and make a most extraordinary noise, unlike any other noise you ever heard, when trying to get out a high note. The "quack" makes him hotter, and he finishes his aria more or less in confusion. Lady Mortgage thanks him for the pleasure he has afforded her friends, and the tenorino believes, after all, he has distinguished himself. Then come some duets or trios, in which one of the singers is sure to blame the other inwardly, if not audibly, for having been a bar too soon or a bar too late. Some one is expected, who has not yet appeared. It is a tenore di forza, in the Civil Service, who at length shows himself. Lady Mortgage rushes at him, playfully abuses him, and is determined he shall make amends for his want of punctuality. The tenore is made more of than would have been the case had he been up to time. Il s'est fait desirer, and does not regret it. A French song, from the "Spoilt Child," and a duet between him and the amateur Patti, terminate the "afternoon music." The hour for the Park has come, and, as it is de rigueur for all true pleasure-seekers to idle away a certain number of hours during the day in that part of Vanity Fair, we will leave them to do so, there being, sad to say, very seldom any music in the Park to listen to.—The Gentleman's Magazine.

Curious Case.

At least one novel feature was presented in a case which has just been decided in the Supreme Court. The widow of a murdered man brought a suit for the sum of 5,000 dols. damages (the largest amount she could claim under the statute) against the defendant, whose wrongful acts are alleged to have resulted in her husband's decease. The mortal difficulty grew out of a difference respecting the interpretation of the terms of a lease, and the defendant, instead of taking the case to Court, sought to obtain his rights by force. In the mêlée consequent upon his unlawful proceedings, one of his workmen discharged a pistol with fatal effect at the husband of the plaintiff. The remarkable phase of the trial appeared in the fact that the man who used the pistol was produced by the widow as the chief witness in support of her claim. Upon his testimony the jury declared in her favour to the full extent of the law. This case also affords a striking commentary on the lax administration of justice in this city. Here was a man still at large on bail and appearing in court as a witness in a case involving his own life and liberty, against whom an indictment for murder was found nearly two years ago, but which has never been brought to trial. Perhaps the District Attorney might explain the matter.—New York Times.

Hydrophobia Cured by Salivation.

Now that the hot weather is fast approaching, and those droves of half-starved pariahs, which are at all times a nuisance, will ere long be inflicted with hydrophobia, it may perhaps be interesting, or at any rate somewhat consoling, in case of accident, to learn that the malady, if skilfully treated, can be readily dispelled. The other day, a case of a man, who was bitten by a mad dog, was brought under the care of Mr. Barnes the medical officer at Hooshiarpore, and, under his skilful treatment, he was soon restored to his usual health. In order to authenticate this fact, we subjoin Mr. Barnes' statement:—"A case of hydrophobia was admitted into the Hooshiarpore Charitable Dispensary, presenting the usual symptoms, which need no description; the treatment and its results are of importance and interest. The patient on admission was suffering from violent and frequent attacks, he was tied on to a chair, surrounded with blankets, leaving the head free, a large vessel of boiling water was placed under him, and a mixture of equal parts of mercury and sulphur well rubbed together was placed in a piece of broken chatty over a charcoal fire and put alongside of the vessel of boiling water; 15 grains of calomel were given at once, and 5 grains repeated every hour, the mercurial vapour bath being kept up till all symptoms subsided. In about four hours the man was perfectly calm and free from bad symptoms; he was removed from the chair and placed on a bed. The after treatment was simply tonics, nourishing food, and gargles, &c., to remove salivation. On the 13th he was discharged cured."—Punjab Times.

Miscellaneous.

IN the twentieth year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, a blacksmith, of London, named Mark Scaliot, made a lock of iron, steel, and brass, of eleven pieces, and a pipe key, all of which weighed only one grain.

The pearl fishery grounds, recently discovered at Western Australia, extend along the coast for 1,000 miles. Upwards of sixty tons of pearl oysters were fished up in December last, and sold for £100 per ton.

BEWARE!—William Murray, a retired publican, aged 78, while walking along Basinghall-street, London, a few evenings since, stepped upon the long dress of a lady, and was thrown to the ground. The lady walked on, and a crowd gathered. The police and some men then lifted the old man, and carried him to the hospital, where he died on Sunday from the effects of a fracture of his right thighbone. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

CHERRYSTONES.—American ingenuity again! Before me, remarks a writer in Once a Week, lies the drawing of a curious little mechanism, invented for the sole purpose of stoning cherries, or other similar fruit, and this is how it acts:—The fruit is placed in a trough or hopper, and, as the machine is worked, rolls into a conical cavity, with a hole at the bottom large enough to let the stone pass through. As soon as the cherry falls into the cavity, a punch descends, and, passing through it, forces the stone down the hole aforesaid, into a tray beneath. When the punch is raised again it carries the fruit impaled upon it, but a fork knocks it off and casts it into a basin by the side of the machine. A row of punches all worked by one hand will do the stoning on a wholesale scale.

TRIBUTE TO THE UNITED STATES.—The St. John (N. B.) News thus refers to the impeachment trial:—"The impeachment of President Johnson presents certain aspects impressive if not really sublime. That a people just emerging from a most costly and sanguinary civil war, and while yet the passions evoked by the contest are at fever heat, should be able, though split into equal and fiercely rival parties, calmly to survey the progress of this trial of their chief ruler, without even a riot, a blow struck, or a drop of bloodshed, is a most remarkable fact, and is worth a volume of glowing eulogy on the strong good sense of the American people and their fitness for self-government. How impossible a spectacle of this kind in Europe. Think of the quiet impeachment of Napoleon III! Nay, think of such an occurrence in any one of the Spanish American Republics, from the Rio Grand to Patagonia! What assassinations, what insurrections, what general confusion would not such an attempt provoke!"

ADMIRALTY DIVERS.—The Admiralty have, reports the Cornhill Magazine, organized a corps of divers under the superintendence of their submarine engineer, Mr. Siebe. Any young A.B. seaman who wish to learn to learn to dive are drafted off for instruction to the Excellent, in Portsmouth harbour, where they are instructed by Mr. William Hardy, the chief diver of Portsmouth dockyard, who has been for twenty years in the service, and has worked at a depth of 160 feet. When the men are considered competent they are commissioned to some vessel—each vessel on service carrying a diver, who is classed as a petty officer. Their business is to repair any damage to the ship's bottom, to examine the screw-propeller and the cable if necessary, and so on. Some of the vessels on foreign stations have rendered essential service by lending their men and apparatus for the recovery of the mails, when an accident has happened to a mail steamer. If we are not mistaken, it is now the practice of the Board of Trade to see that a diver is appointed to all the seaports in the kingdom.

"DRAWING ROOM" RAILROAD CARS.—The Troy Times describes three sumptuous "drawing-room" cars now building in that city for the Hudson River Railroad Company. They cost $15,000 each. The body of each car is 64 feet long. The projections of the platforms add about ten feet more to the length. Each car contains eight small apartments or drawing-rooms, capable of accommodating four persons each, and four large rooms suitable for an entire family. One of the large rooms is set apart for the common use of all the occupants of the car, and is fitted up with elegantly upholstered revolving chairs. Each room, except the last, contains, besides the seats, a table, mirror, hat-racks, and other conveniences. The body of the car is finished in black walnut and cedar. The roof is elevated, and artistically frescoed; along the side reversible exhausters so arranged as to exclude all cinders and keep the air in the car pure and equable. Cold and hot air conductors, with register opening into each room, pass through the car. The heaviest plate glass, three feet square, supply each room with light and afford a full view of the dissolving landscape as the car rushes along upon its course. Wilton carpets cover the floor, and heavy costly curtains to the windows afford protection to those who desire exclusion from the public eye. The cars are set on six-wheel trucks, are strongly built, and in all respects confer great credit upon the skill and taste of the builders.

THE POWER OF THE TONGUE.—It is talk which initiates all our ends; to love, to friendship, it is almost always the tongue which is the gateway. The preservation of a young woman from the pursuit of a mad bull, or the rescue of a fellow-creature from drowning, are opportunities that do not take place so often in real life as in novels. The manly, yet conciliatory expression of an opinion, the eloquent eulogy of a pursuit, or the witty defence of a pastime; in short, a few well-chosen words, well-spoken, upon any subject, form the best introduction to our fellow-creatures, and do more to attract them to us than any natural advantage, except, indeed, the personal beauty of a woman. It is the knowledge of the power of this latter charm which makes pretty women commonly such foolish talkers. They have only to show their faces to win at once, not only the audiences of the wise and witty, but (supposing at least they are of the masculine gender) the wise and witty themselves. Why, then, they argue, should we cultivate the powers of speech, when our tongues and lips are more eloquent than others tongues? A question, however difficult it may be to answer now convincingly, to which they will one day receive a terribly conclusive reply. The good looks of a man, as squinting Wilkes said, only avail him with a woman, against one better skilled in the art of conversation, for the first quarter of an hour; and with one of his own sex, it may be added, for a considerably less space of time. It was not by his pretty spots and gorgeous scales that the serpent persuaded Eve, but the flicker of his forked tongue.—From "Maxims by a Man of the World," in Chambers's Journal.

PARIS IMPROVEMENTS.—When Sir Walter Scott visited Paris in 1815, two or three months after the battle of Waterloo, one of the things which struck him most was the Rue de la Paix, which had just changed its name from the Rue de l'Empereur, "a fine street, which not only boasts a breadth corresponding to the magnificence of its buildings, but is actually accommodated with two gutters, one on each side, instead of the kennel in the centre where the filth floats or stagnates, in all the other streets of Paris." But among the proofs of extravagance, of expense, into which his ambition to distinguish himself hurried him, and which the Parisians of that day thought unnecessary, the construction of this magnificent street seemed to Sir Walter not the least remarkable. The Rue de la Paix will no longer be cited as the finest street of Paris. That part of the "magnificent buildings" which opened on the Boulevard des Capucines is at this moment in course of demolition, and on both sides at once. A new street running in an oblique direction, so as to connect the new opera with the Theatre Français in the Rue Richelieu, is to be opened, and to effect this the corresponding buildings in the intervening streets are also in course of being laid in the dust. The name of "Rue de la Paix" will disappear, and the new thoroughfare will be called the "Avenue de Napoleon." It makes one smile to hear of the extravagant expense incurred by the first Emperor in laying out the Rue de la Paix. It was but a drop in the ocean compared to what the present Prefect of Paris has done during his tenure of office. The subject is one which has begun seriously to alarm the Parisians, however proud they may be of their capital.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Hongkong, Friday Evening.

In the early part of this morning the market for Bengal drug was rather quiet, but soon after the arrival of the steamer Nile a good deal of activity pervaded the market throughout the day, resulting in large transactions at improved prices, both for ready cargo and to arrive of the 7th Sales on three weeks' time. Large holders of drug, as well as speculators for low rates, appeared as buyers, and at the opening Patna was placed at $630 cash, and $632½ on time, closing at $635 to $636¼, with more buyers than sellers with delivery within three or four days. Seventh sales drug, changed hands at $637½ to a small extent, and subsequently large transactions were done at as high as $645. Against former sales at $622½ to $630 a chest, purchases have been made at $637½ to $645. It is reported that there are advices from Calcutta via Rangoon of a later date, giving high prices, and the probability of a small supply coming forward next month; much faith should not however be placed in this news, and it must be taken cum grano salis. In Malwa a large amount of business has likewise been transacted, between 150 to 160 chests, may safely be computed as the total quantity settled, at $655 to $660 on cash and credit terms to foreigners and the natives. Of first-class drug there is not much left at the latter rate. The following are the closing prices:—Patna $635 to $637½ for ready cargo, and $643¾ to $645 on time of the 7th sale to arrive. Benares $622½ to $625. Malwa $660 to $635 quoted, really good drug.

There is perhaps a shade of improvement to notice to-day in the aspect of general trade, but nothing beyond a slight inquiry for plain cotton fabrics. The Chinese have been asking for 8/4 Grey Shirtings, and a few sales of a favorite chop have been made at $2.90, but only in small parcels, and for 1,000 pieces this price would be difficult to obtain. Sales reported to-day and yesterday include 1,500 pieces 8/4 Grey Shirtings at $2.85 to $2.90, 500 pieces 8 lbs T-Cloths at $2.90, 800 pieces 7 lbs. at $2.30, 240 pieces Dyed Brocades at $4.00, 500 pieces assorted Long Ells at $8.60 and 6,000 pieces American Drills at $5.30. Raw Cotton shows a slight improvement in the price for average quality staple.

The quantity placed to-day includes 55-
Bengal at $16.80 to $17.40, and 100 bales bay at $20.25. There has been nothing in shares.
From Foochow advices received per Peter market for freights is reported. Some had commenced loading at £3, and finish
£4, while others, just arrived, were dem
£4, and there was a probability of ra proving still further.
The Nile brings only a small quantity for this place.

TRIBUTE TO THE UNITED STATES.—The St. John (N. B.) News thus refers to the impeachment trial:—"The impeachment of President Johnson presents certain aspects impressive if not really sublime. That a people just emerging from a most costly and sanguinary civil war, and while yet the passions evoked by the contest are at fever heat, should be able, though split into equal and fiercely rival parties, calmly to survey the progress of this trial of their chief ruler, without even a riot, a blow struck, or a drop of bloodshed, is a most remarkable fact, and is worth a volume of glowing eulogy on the strong good sense of the American people and their fitness for self-government. THE POWER OF THE TONGUE.—It is talk which initiates all our ends; to love, to friendship, it is almost always the tongue which is the gateway. The preservation of a young woman from the pursuit of a mad bull, or the rescue of a fellow-creature from drowning, are opportunities that do not take place so often in real life as in novels. The usual, yet conciliatory, expression of an opinion, the eloquent eulogy of a portrait, or the witty defence of a pastime; in short, a few well-chosen words, well-spoken, upon any subject, form the best introduction to our fellow-creatures, and do more to attract them to us than any natural advantage, except, indeed, the personal beauty of a woman. My "WHEELERBEAN HAIR RESTORATIVE!!!" I wish to bring to your notice (a discovery made solely by me), the properties of this most wonderful preparation will, I guarantee, have the desired effects of restoring GREY HAIR to its NATURAL HUE, and at the same time preventing baldness; in all cases of diseased human hair, it is most effective, for it removes the outer and older portions of the epidermis and thus frees the pores of the skin much more completely than any of the Brushes or Gloves now in use.
Mr. WHEELER will be prepared to call at the residence of any Lady or Gentleman requiring his services, who may find it inconvenient to visit the establishment, on receipt of a chit to that effect.
Thanking you for past favors, and trusting to meet with a renewal of the same,
We have the honor to remain, Sir,
Yours very obediently,
F. R. WHEELER,
AND
J. EUZIERE.

EUSTON ROAD, LONDON.
FORTY YEARS' USE OF THESE MEDICINES
(Morison's Vegetable Universal Medicines)
By the public has proved their efficacy and virtues, and the truth of Mr. MORISON'S system as to the cure of diseases. Being composed only of vegetable matter or medicinal herbs, they are harmless to the most tender age or weakest frame, under every stage of suffering; the most pleasant in their operation, and the most certain in searching out the root of any complaint. Besides cleansing the great highway of the body—the bowels—they act copiously on the kidneys, the liver, and the skin. A sense of relief in the whole system is felt very shortly after they have been taken,—the blood flows more regularly, and sleep is given to those long deprived of it. The medicines consist of three sorts. No. 1 Morison's Pills; No. 2 Morison's Pills. In boxes at 7½d., 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.; family packets, 11s. each; also the Vegetable Aperient Powders, 1s. 1½d. per box.
MORISON'S UNIVERSAL OINTMENT
Is recommended as the best external application in all cases of Wounds, Cutaneous Eruptions, &c. In Pots at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.
The above Vegetable Universal Medicines are sold by the Hygeian Agents, and all Medicine Vendors.
